Champions Increase Lead by Taking 2 Games From Boston

Jess Barnes and Ryan Are Hit Hard in Opener, but V. Barnes Staves Off Defeat; Hill Finishes Strong in 2d Game After Scott Is Driven From Mound

By John Kieran

The home-coming of the Giants was a perfect success. With only a sparse crowd on hand to enjoy the festive occasion the Clan McGraw repulsed two attacks by the marauding Braves at the Polo Grounds yesterday, and emerged victor in both battles by the same score of 7 to 6. The buzz of the world's series bee is getting louder every moment.

Two Close Shaves

Of course, John J. McGraw is not crying from the housetops that the pen-nant is cinched, but his smile as he sauntered out from the shadow of Coogan's Bluff in the cool of the evening indicated that the little Napoleon duly appreciated a five and a half game lead at this stage of the pennant pro-cession.

The savage and uncultured Braves were counted out in both games. They Ryan, p. .. were pitchers' battles of the type in which the Giants usually indulge, five which the Giants usually indulge, five huriers taking part in each contest. The Barnes family and Rosy Bill Ryan worked the first game for the Polo Grounders against Rube Marquard and a youth named Cooney. In the second engagement Jack Scott and Carmen Hill joined forces against the Braves, while Watson, Braxton and Tim McNamara did the mound duty for Fred Mitchell's men.

Joss Barmes pitched shutout ball for seven innings in the early game, while his supporting cast was battering the enemy hurlers for a seven-run lead. In the eighth he blew higher than a vagrant kite, while the troublesome tribe from Boston scored four runs. Bill Ryan came to the rescue, but the lifeboats were sent out to him in the lifeboats were sent out to him in the lifeboats were sent out to him in the sinth when the game was on the verge of becoming a total wreck. Virgil Barnes had the honor of staving off defeat and saving the family jewels. The Braves got fourteen hits while the storm was reging, and the Giants got only twelve bingles, but the advantage in the run column was just enough to please the customers.

Scott Pounded Hard

In the second contest Jack Scott was pounded for six runs in the third and fourth innings. He gave way to Carmen Hill, who held the Braves to apair of hits and no score at all while the Clan McGraw was battering sway at Watson and Braxton for the runs that finally won the game. Five tallies were garnered from Johnny Watson's offerings in the fourth, and "Lefty" Braxton was found for the two runs needed to win the game in the seventh stanzs.

With Jess Barnes drifting along in his best style, the Giants piled up what appeared to be a safe lead in the first game. They collected their runs in pairs. In the first inning a double by Bancroft, an error by Ford, a single by Hish Meusel and a double steal gave the Clan McGraw two runs. Long George Kelly's fifteenth homer that soared into the left field bleachers in the third.

had singled added two more tallies in the third.

Again in the sixth Richard de Marquis heard the melancholy rattle of base hits, and the Giants grouped four singles by Kelly, Cunningham, Jess Barnes and Bancroft for another pair of markers. The last New York tally drifted across in the seventh, but it took three safe hits and a sacrifice fly to produce this lonely score.

Then the fun began. Boeckel batted for Rube Marquard in the eighth and singled. Bancroft messed up Larry Kopf's grounder, and Jess Barnes started to waver. Seeing the Giant hurler ready to topple after pitching shutout ball for seven innings, the Braves laid about them with the tomahawk in savage style. Cruise singled, Roser doubled, Harbare singled and four runs were over the pan, with Jess Barnes headed for the clubhouse.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11.—A single by McManus in the ninth inning, with the bases full and two out, enabled St. Louis to take to-day's game from Detroit, 5 to 4, thus holding the margin between the Yankees and the locals to one and a half games. The hit by McManus followed Sisler's triple, and passes to Williams and Jacobson, after Sisler had tied the score with his tree-base hit to right center.

Sisler got two out of five tries, making the first prince consecutive games in which he has hit safely, or only one game behind the modern major league record established by Ty Cobb in 1911.

He further increased his lead for the games in the ninth inning, with the bases full and two out, enabled St.

Louis to take to-day's game from Detroit, 5 to 4, thus holding the margin between the Yankees and the locals to one and a half games. The hit by McManus followed Sisler's triple, and Johnson relieved him in the fifth in-ing and Karr, who took his place, was also hit freely.

Brillheart was effective but wild and Johnson relieved him in the fifth in-ing with the stick, getting five clean singles in as many turns at bat.

Having nearly lost the first prize

Having nearly lost the first prize package when it was all wrapped up to take home, the world's champions went out and retrieved the late contest when it appeared to be lost beyond hope. Jack Scott was bruised for a trio of tallies in the third inning on a walk, singles by Cruise and Barbare and a double by Powell. In the fourth the Giant hurler was assaulted for three more runs and led off the field in a battered condition. A triple by this same Powell sent in two of the runs and the outfielder scored the last tally himself.

There the Braves stopped short, mainly at the request of Carmen Hill, late of Indianapolis. They got just two small singles for the remainder of the game while the Clan McGraw opened up its batteries and went over the top of a six-run handleap. The Giants batted around in their half of the fourth and before Johnny Watson could get out of the line of fire a fusillade of hits that included a double by Kelly and a triple by Stengel netted five runs.

The Giant shortstop won the game with his hitting, but nearly lost it on his errors. Each time that Bancroft made a bobble a pitcher was carted to the junkheap. Jess Barnes and Bill Ryan may take the matter up at the next meeting of the local pitchers' union.

Jess Barnes, by the way, tossed up a slow ball to Barbare in the eighth inning of the first game, and the chances are that Jess will not care to repeat the performance. Barbare counted ten before he swung and the result was a line single that scored two runs.

When you hear of footwork the first thought is boxing. But the feet happen to be important adjuncts to other pastimes. When Bill Tilden was playing a hard match recently, a certain expert stepped up with this remark, "Just keep your eyes on Tilden's feet. You'll see some of the greatest footwork in tennis. He knows how to have his feet ready for any return and at times they work faster than the eye can follow."

So we watched Tilden's feet, and they kept both eyes busy. The shift came at remarkable speed when needed and they could start in any M. Thom's, plo 0 10 Numm, p. 40 10 M. Johnston and Travers.

Here and there in sport certain competitors remind you of certain others. Bill Johnston has always reminded us of Jerry Travers.

Both are on the slight side, with much the same cast of countenance. More than all, both have that appearance of detached determination, of mental serenity, that controls a blazing flame of will power

There is about both an atmosphere or a look of what might be called relaxed concentration. Neither appears to be over-taut under fire. Their main idea seems to be to shoot the entire works, and leave the rest of it to destiny. Their part is to give all they have, the score taking care of

"I would like a point of information," writes F. J. H. "When Dempsey fought Carpentier he used the rabbit punch repeatedly. The moving pictures of the fight show something like fifteen or twenty blows of this sort. Being a stronger man, he also held and hit Carpentier more than once. All right, there was no criticism to speak of. But when Wills does about the same thing why do several of the same writers, who had no criticism of Dempsey's tactics, proceed to flay the hide off Wills as a foul fighter? If Wills is foul, so is Dempsey, but few of them will say so."

We have seen Wills box only twice. On neither occasion was he guilty of any foul tactics. We heard one well known boxing official say that if Carpentier's mesmerizing manager had been on the job Dempsey hould never have been allowed to get away with a lot of things he put over. So it goes. In this snappy age you can rarely please anybody any of the time.

Bambino Drives Nos. 30 and 31 Into Left Field Bleachers and His Big Bat Counts for 5 Tallies; Witt Fields Brilliantly, Raking In Seven Flies

By W. B. Hanna

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—The base hits were ringing clear of the New York bats this afternoon and the Yankees began their wind up trip to hostile fields with a fine display of vigor and an easy victory. The beat the Athletics 9 to 4. Shawkey held the Athletics without being force to pitch to the limit, and the Yankees rattled hits off a procession pitchers, including Bob Hasty, who recently mowed them down

Ruth had a very exhilarating afternoon. He rapped all comers impartially and made two two-baggers and two long home runs. He batted in five runs. He and Witt were the leading men of the pleasing performance. Witt was brilliant in center, and seven fly balls, most of them hard catches, fell into his strong and eager grip. Whitey Witt rustled a run for the Yankees in the first inning. He bunted and drew a wild throw from Dykes. Ruth tapped Hasty for a two-bagger and Witt crossed the pentagon. In the home half Meusel kicked Dykes's base hit all over the place and Dykes's base hit all over the place and Dykes went to third. He drifted in on McGowan's out at first.

The Yankees helped themselves to another in the second. Meusel tripled off the right field wall and had hardly pulled up when Ward singled and brought him across. On a hit and run play Scott lined to Galloway and the result was a double play.

Lusty Hitting in Fourth

Lusty Hitting in Fourth

Lusty Hitting in Fourth

Two runs came to the Yankees in the fourth by virtue of lusty hitting. Pipp singled, Schang doubled, Meusel made a long sacrifice fly, Ward singled and Shawkey singled. The last hits didn't count in the increment, but nourished in the averages. Hasty shut out the Yankees the last time he met them, but to-day Connie Mack decided four innings of Hasty were plenty and ditched him in the home fourth to let Miller bat for him.

Two were on bases and two out when Miller swung his mace, and Witt shut off a home run with a splendid catch while squeezed against the center field fence. He was leaning across it when he made the helpful haul.

Ruth in the fifth nailed Naylor for his thirtieth home run. He hit high up in the left field bleachers and the ball bounced into the street.

The Babe was hitting them to-day, and in the sixth inning after Shawkey had singled, Witt had beaten a bunt and Dugan had sacrificed the Babe lined a two-bagger to left center and brought in Bob and Whitey. Mack switched Naylor into a siding and put in Schilling. Schang's Schilling shocker for two bases brought in Ruth.

Runs were plentiful and hits numerous and Welch thumped a home run into the left field bleachers in the sixth.

Ruth's thirty-first homer came in the sixth.

Ruth's thirty-first homer came in the eighth inning and also went into the left field seats. Schilling was made to look more like tuppence. Bruggy batted for him in the eighth and struck out and left two men on bases after Shawkey had been birched for two runs, which did not worry Bob much.
